FREE COIN SHOW LISTINGS:

Only NUMISMATIC NEWS provides free weekly listings of coin shows, because we know how important shows are to the hobby. Ours is the largest and most thorough listing of shows anywhere!

Enthusiastic collectors, dealers, clubs and show promoters avoid show conflicts and plan their travel with this user-friendly directory. An appreciative reader had this to say: "Thank you for supporting the collector by continuing to publish the coin show schedule at no cost to coin clubs. To charge a fee for this service could be cost prohibitive to small clubs which sponsor coin shows and would deprive collectors from the information."

Michael M. Greenspan, Newark, NJ.

That's not all! Twice a year our free Show & Auction Guide delivers valuable long-range planning information up to a year in advance, in a handy format.

NUMISMATIC NEWS is ready and willing to spread the word about your show. We sincerely encourage free show listings as one more way to help the hobby. Thousands of active hobbyists benefit from the service. Plus, subscribers also receive a free yearly club guide. Joining a club is an excellent way to learn more about your collecting specialty.

A MESSAGE FROM YOUR PRESIDENT:

The ground hog may have seen his shadow, but this is still a good time for all of Iowa's coin collectors to come out of hibernation. The coin show circuit is upon us, and my show calendar is filling up fast! The Mid-America Coin-a-rama Show is in Nevada again this year, on March 5th and 6th. Last year's show was a good one, and this year's should be at least as good. Hope to see you all there. There will be an I N A Board of Director's meeting on Saturday, right after the bourse closes.

JoAnn tells me that our membership is up by sixteen or so. It sure is good to hear that--and let's hope the trend continues. We have a new club here in Sioux City. Its members are working hard at making it successful. In fact, this new Sioux City Club will be hosting the I N A's Fall Show this year. (We'll have more details later, but at least we now know that this show will October 22 and 23--and that it will not be in conflict with any other regional show.)

Tom Gardner still needs your input (short articles, letters or comments) to make our Iowa Collector interesting to the broad range of Iowa's coin, token and currency collectors. Make a resolution to send him something, maybe just a couple of paragraphs about what your local club is doing, sometime during 1994.

See you at Nevada.

Dean Peterson
President

FROM THE SECRETARY'S DESK:

We want to welcome the sixteen new members of the I N A to our organization. We're confident you'll make many new friendships through your participation in our activities and clubs. We invite you to share your numismatic knowledge and experiences with others through The Collector, as all I N A members and clubs are encouraged to do.

Incidentally, we also have three new life members in the Iowa Numismatic Association!

Harry and I just returned from a three week vacation in Arizona. What a shock it was to come back to minus ten degree weather! Still, it's weather like this that's good for working on our coin hobby.

I will again be taking dues on Saturday, March 5th, at the Coin-a-rama in Nevada. Any dues not paid at that time will be billed in the following two weeks. Remember, it saves the I N A $.58c each time dues are paid prior to when dues notices are mailed.

Numismatrecally yours

JoAnn Peters

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor

Please let your readers know that the next Iowa Token Collectors' Breakfast is scheduled for 9:00 a.m. on Saturday, February 26, at the Best Western Westfield Inn in Coralville, Iowa. We'll be meeting in the Plum Grove Room, which is the same place we met last time, only then it was called the Diplomat Room.

At our August 21st meeting we were each given an "IOWA TOKEN BREAKFAST" square wooden nickel by David J. Morice. No doubt the significance of this shape is that we are all "square" collectors. A special thanks to you, David, for this special addition to our collections!

The Iowa Token Collectors are a group of collectors who share a passion for informality as well as a love of tokens. We have no officers, constitution or dues. We meet at irregular intervals and welcome all to our meetings. Hope to see you on February 26!

Your coordinator,

Milton Heitman

IOWA'S G.A.R. MEDALS
Part One: The Belknap Medal

By Thomas P. Gardner

Note The following information was originally published in The Tokens of Keokuk, Iowa. It is reprinted here with the permission of the author and the publisher, the Keokuk Coin Club.

Rev. 19TH ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT DEPARTMENT OF IOWA G.A.R. KEOKUK
April 25 26 27 1893 (at edge, surrounding the words that follow) PRESENTED
BY THE * * CITY * * OF KEOKUK

Size 37 mm      Metal Al      Shape Rd (bts.)

Note This piece, a medalet that was suspended from a badge, demonstrates the high regard in which William Belknap was held by the men who served under him and by the citizens of Keokuk, even after his impeachment as Secretary of War during President Ulysses S. Grant's Second Administration.

William W. Belknap was born September 22, 1820, in Newburgh, New York. His father was General William G. Belknap, a regular Army officer who gained prominence during the Mexican War. Belknap graduated from Princeton in 1848 and then studied law with a Georgetown (D.C.) law firm. He was admitted to the bar and moved to Keokuk in 1851.

During the next ten years in Keokuk, Belknap and his wife Cora became leading members of Keokuk society. His law practice prospered, as did his political career, and he was active in the local militia, the City Rifles. Belknap's law partner was Ralph P. Lowe, who was later to serve Iowa as Governor and Supreme Court Justice. Much of their practice was devoted to real estate. In 1857, when the local real estate market collapsed, Belknap was elected to the Iowa General Assembly as a "Douglas" Democrat.

William W. Belknap and his wife Amanda ("Puss")

President Grant accepting Belknap's resignation, March 2, 1876.

The Civil War changed everything for Belknap—his politics, his family, and his position in society. He began the war as a major in Iowa's Fifteenth Volunteer Infantry. His military career reached its pinnacle a little more than three years later when, as a brigadier general, Belknap commanded Crocker's Brigade and fought with Sherman on the "March to the Sea." At the war's end, Belknap was brevetted to the rank of major general and offered a field officer's commission in the regular Army. All accounts agree that he had been a remarkable leader of men, one who led by his own example and rare physical courage.

Belknap's wife, Cora, had died during the war. He received his commission and returned to Keokuk, where he was appointed to be the U.S. Marshal and Revenue Inspector for the First District. In 1868 he married Carita Tompkins of Kentucky. A year later, President Grant appointed Belknap to the post of Secretary of War. By now, he was a staunch Republican.

The Belknaps soon became the toast of Washington society, entertaining lavishly in their beautiful and expensive home. This was Carita's responsibility, and her husband never poured too closely into her "housekeeping" expenses.

Carita's health started to fail after the birth of a son, Robert, in 1870. Belknap began to rely on the help of his sister-in-law, Amanda, whom everyone called Puss. Carita died before the year was out. Robert died before he was a year old. And then Amanda's husband, John Bower, died. Belknap married Puss in 1873.

In the 1880s, one newspaper reporter described Puss as "a tall, striking brunette with a superb presence, a handsome face and a dashing manner." Her evening gowns were startlingly decorative, and some of the ladies of the capital who did not possess Mrs. Belknap's special charms of figure talked so much about her gowns that the Washington correspondents took the matter up, and the secretary's wife found herself a much-talked-of woman.

On March 2, 1876, Representative Hester Clymer, a Pennsylvania Democrat, accused Belknap of malfeasance in office and moved that he be impeached. Clymer, who, ironically, had been Belknap's roommate at Princeton, explained how Belknap had appointed Caleb P. Marsh as the official post trader at Fort Sill, in the Indian Territory. The previous post trader, John Evans, paid Marsh in order to continue to operate his lucrative business. Marsh split this payment (of $15,000 per year) with Carita Belknap, who had arranged the entire matter.

Puss evidently took over when her sister, Carita, died. Just how much of these arrangements Belknap himself was aware of remains conjectural. He said he was willing to accept responsibility for what had happened but never admitted knowledge of the arrangements between Marsh and his wives.

One of the principal witnesses to testify against Belknap was George Armstrong Custer. Custer testified that it was "common belief" among army officers on the North Missouri that Belknap was a silent partner of many Indian and post traders. Furthermore, his testimony implicated several other men along with Belknap, including the President's brother, Orvil.

Grant was furious with Custer and very nearly did not let him join his regiment for the 1876 campaign that had been planned against the Sioux. No doubt Custer hoped to distinguish himself in some sort of victory over the Sioux just prior to the beginning of the Democratic National Convention, which was to open in St. Louis on June 27. Indeed, the Battle of Little Big Horn took place just two days earlier, on June 25.

At any rate, the Senate failed to convict Belknap on the House's bill of impeachment, by a vote of 35 guilty to 25 not guilty, just two votes short of the two-thirds needed for a conviction. Twenty-three of those who voted for acquittal said that they did so only because they believed the Senate no longer had jurisdiction. Grant had permitted Belknap to resign just a couple of hours before Clymer had moved to impeach.

Belknap's trial left him impoverished. It left him without a wife, too, for Puss and her daughter left Washington for Paris, and there was a rumor that she did this in the company of a United States Senator. She did not return to the United States until a year or so before Belknap's death.

Puss received a lot of attention during the summer of 1889, shortly after she had returned to the United States and was staying at Coney Island. It was, in fact, her bathing costume that was responsible for the attention she received. One contemporary newspaper described it as "a red and white striped affair, showing her perfect form in all its graceful curves--a little low-necked, sleeveless bodice and a very short skirt were all that it consisted of. The lady's lower limbs were encased in silk tights."

William W. Belknap died October 13, 1890, in Washington. Supreme Court Justice Samuel F. Miller died the same day, also in Washington. Both men were from Keokuk. Miller had been a character witness at Belknap's impeachment trial.

FRENCH ASSIGNATS: AFFORDABLE HISTORY

by John Orozco

I was doing my Christmas shopping when I had my first encounter with something I thought my brother would really like and something my budget could afford. It was a small piece of French currency, an assignat, dated 1789. Although this was a good year for the United States, since it marked the end of British rule, France was just beginning to see what years of discontentment might create--or destroy.

The three classes or estates in France were at each other's throats. The nation's wealth was in the hands of the two privileged classes--the nobility and the clergy. Everyone else fit into the third estate, the peasantry, who suffered miserably, spending what little money they had on taxes and tithes to the church. In a short-lived effort, France's revolutionary government attempted to appease the third estate by issuing the assignat. Theoretically, the peasant could use this money to buy land which the state had taken from the clergy. In fact, the public deeply distrusted this paper money, hoarding all metallic money, and forcing the assignat to be discounted more and more. The inflationary spiral that followed saw assignats fall to less than one percent of their former value. And, they were printed in such enormous quantities that they are still common today--an affordable piece of history.

My mother loved her gift, having it framed and hung in his living room. I sometimes wonder if he realizes that this small piece of paper, along with the millions more that are identical to it, not only played havoc with a nation's economy and destroyed the lives or the livelihood of millions of French people.

A CIVIL WAR BATTLE TO BE FOUGHT AT KEOKUK'S SPRING SHOW

On Saturday, April 23, and Sunday, April 24 the Keokuk Coin Club will be having its annual spring show at the Keosaupee Mall. There will be approximately sixty tables set up for this show, with about half of them devoted to coins, currency, tokens and stamps. The other half will be devoted to a variety of hobbies, ranging from baseball cards to antiques to crafts. Two of the tables, reserved by the Keokuk club, will be devoted to a special display of Civil War era memorabilia, with an emphasis on the coins, paper money, scrip, tokens and medals that the Civil War generated. This display will be put together from material in the collections of club members.

This emphasis on the Civil War is a part of a wider effort in Keokuk to remember this conflict and how it shaped our country. The centerpiece of all these activities will be the seventh annual reenactment of the Battle of Pea Ridge, hosted by the Keokuk City Rifles, and taking place at Keokuk's Rand Park.

Pea Ridge "the Battle that saved Missouri for the Union," took place on March 7 and March 8, in 1862. On the first day, the Confederate forces, led by Major General Earl Van Dorn, attacked a smaller force led by Keokuk's Brigadier General Samuel R. Curtis, who were digging themselves into a position overlooking Little Sugar Creek and near Pea Ridge. To avoid attacking an entrenched position, Van Dorn moved his forces around to the north, planning to attack the Union forces from behind. Curtis responded by facing about and preparing to engage Van Dorn's forces in the open.

Van Dorn launched a two-pronged attack against Curtis, with part of his forces moving south from the west side of Pea Ridge, on into the village of Leetown. These forces were subjected to withering fire that resulted in substantial losses, including the death of two generals and a colonel. Some of the Confederate forces broke and ran, but many were able to regroup and make their way to Elkhorn Tavern, two miles to the east.

Meanwhile, the other prong of Van Dorn's attack came at the Union forces from the east side of Pea Ridge and were much more successful. They pushed the Federals back beyond Elkhorn Tavern, joining up that night with the forces that had attacked from the west side of Pea Ridge. On balance, the Confederates forces appeared to have gained more than they lost on this first day of battle.

The second day of the battle, however, left the Federal forces in control of the field-- and of Missouri. First, there was the sustained, accurate fire of Curtis's massed artillery. This was followed by concentrated infantry and cavalry attacks. Finally, Van Dorn's wagon train, with reserve ammunition, failed to arrive. He was left with no choice but to retreat.

The reenactment of this battle, in combination with many related activities, should give the coin collector with an interest in history lots to do in addition to a visit to the Keokuk Coin Club's spring show. For more information about the reenactment and related activities, please contact the Keokuk Area Convention and Tourism Bureau at (319) 524-5599. It is located in the Pierce Building, 4th and Main Streets, Keokuk, Iowa 52632. For more information about the Keokuk Coin Club's Spring Coin & All Hobby Show, contact the Keokuk Coin Club, P.O. Box 172, Keokuk, Iowa 52632. The club's secretary is Tom Gardner; you can reach him at 524-7366 most evenings.
